So after reading Babs Yerunkle's hilarious "The Book of Jobe" and Bek D. Corbin's "No Beast So Fierce!" I felt absolutely inspired enough to make a kind of... errr... speculative comic on certain events may have transpired. I suppose if you haven't read those two stories, this might be kind of spoilerish. I'll probably make a few more in the future, I had an entertaining mental image of Jobe's father finding out. I hope these entertain you all! And thank you writers for making such fantastic characters.

Replied in DA myself too, but only at the last one.

I never read about Jobe, outside of a remark in Ayla's story, but these strips are awesome.

I need to get something to drink and re-read this so I can shoot it out my nose. Well-done.

Incidentally, something about your art reminds me of Ben Templesmith... is he an influence?

Yes, yes! These are fabulous! Remarkably accurate, too. Or perhaps my mental image has just been captured and replaced by your wonderful art.

I like Sara's blush. I like her zipping up her pants (but she's not done, and all the tentacles are still showing).

In the written Sara/Jobe story, it's mostly Hippy who's in the other room. (sigh) How I regret that now. The cute catgirl with the bland-but-boggled expression is soooo much better. Well, what say we just go with your version. (Was Merry even there yet? Who cares!)

And, I must say, I believe you captured Jobe's attitudes and expressions perfectly. From the annoying asshole-twit in the first panel, the that LOVELY drow-babe doing the sulk-stomp.

Thanks! Mega-thanks!

I must admit these are so damn cute and spot on. I loved that Sara has made pets of some of the critters sent to harm her. "Frank"?

Is that short for Frankenfurter?

Is it really a blush? To me it looks like Sara's permanent eye shadow, as it is centered around the eyes and not cheeks.

But the "bend over" story element is great, as well as Sara's comments.

I also really liked it. Calling the Dildo Viper "Richard", took me a while to get that one. Just in case anyone didn't get it, "Richard" is sometimes contracted to "Dick". Don't ask me why.

He's like Superman, crushing coal into diamonds!

Warren probably regularly makes diamonds that way, as a way to get stress relief from running this site, Real-world, etc. as those "Stress Relief Squeeze Balls" just cant take it.

Just don't shake hands with him, if he's stressed out.

I don't know what's worse: the idea of Jobe writing something unspeakable, or Sara sending him something unspeakable.

Welcome to Whateley! And on the subject of abandon all hope, I just got into reading Maggie's "Heaven and Hell" stories from the Library here - fantastic stuff <3 I do hope to continue drawing these, and a friend has been giving me a ton of rather entertaining and messed up ideas to continue doing so. That was Jadis' doing -- she enchanted the plushie so that hugging it would give one a feeling of comfort. She specifically choose the spider plushie because she didn't like it.

Jadis may not like Webby, and may have enchanted it for Phoebe, but Phoebe would have a natural like of spiders, given Jobe using R.A. Salvatore's works as part of his research into Drow's, which would make Webby that much more successful as an object to enchant; spiders are nifty and reassuring, so the Law of Similarity would strengthen the enchantment given the recipient being a Drow.

On the other hand, it may just be that Webby calms her down after getting all hot and bothered reading her mother's arachnerotica, which raises the question of whether Webby is an age-appropriate toy for the young, innocent, and impressionable Phoebe.

On the gripping hand, more comic please?

I give you more Jobe! My friend Scarfgirl and I thought the comment by someone in the Author forums about Prickles in the Jobe comment thread being a good source for more comics was a good idea, so we started throwing ideas around;

(It seemed a funnier way to go than just drawing Jadis wandering around campus with boob envy as I'd originally planned)

Ahhh, indeed? For some reason, I had misrecalled it as carrying a lethal recessive on the X chromosome, thus the origin of the Tortoiseshell Tom myth / tale. After a quick read of some vet sources, I was likely thinking of a fertile male tortoiseshell in that instance. Thank you for the clarification.

Heyla

For the record (and because, while I am on hiatus from the Cabal, they DID let me in -snicker-)... James faced Bluejay of the Alphas in his final. He did not manage a victory but somehow ended up with an A- as his final grade. Snippets of that are already written for the fourth published tale of James and Whiskers.

Unfortunately, the third and the fourth tales are still in (very slow) production so I still remain on hiatus.

I thought we already had three tales of James? I've got three James stories listed in the wiki List of Canon Stories page. Should I make Time for an Unexpected Gift and Time for an Unexpected Gift: Epilogue count as a single two-part story instead and list Legacy of Friendship as James 2, then?

Yes, my personal files and notes consider the Epilogue as a Babs-demanded addition to the short preceding story. You may thank her for the added information, I was going to leave everyone hanging. It can go either way as far as your listing is concerned, although I doubt it will change the way I think and refer to them. -sheep-

Also, how much moderation you get is directly proportional to how popular you are. An obscure artist can get away with murder, a popular artist will be scrutinized. Lots of double standards.

Why hello! It's been a while. Seeing as I had tons of time before inflicting massive pain on the ear drums of the denizens of the local bar via Karaoke induced torture, I felt the urge to do some more Jobe Watch comics (Maybe I should just name it Whateley watch? There's more opportunities for comics if I deviate some from Jobe.. hmm..) But anyway. I uber-censored that comic that got taken down, and added a new one (I'll try to make a few more so I can post them over the next few days)

I knew it! Fey isn't the only Sidhe on campus, just the most prominent!

Though I must ask, why would Hartford be going to a Elven Topless Carwash, run by a known Gadgeteer/Devisor who has trouble distinguishing between the two?

Mind you, I think that Cait masterminded this. She trained and fed the pigeons, knew that the closest carwash that Hartford could bluff her way into getting a free wash at was a Devisors carwash. If the "Devisor Laundry" sign is to be believed, Hartford has no one to blame but herself, should the Devise blow up and take her car with it.

Cait, if this is true, you are a genius!

There are seven, as of the end of February.

Four of them are mentioned in the last Ill Winds segment to be posted; they've been on campus since at least the beginning of Fall term. A couple of them might be sophomores or higher, but I don't know that for sure.

Then there's Jobe and Belphoebe.

I don't think is so much an "open-ogling policy" but rather, well, an acknowledgment that they are just as likely to be ogling the *same* target. I mean, how can Vox complain of Ayla ogling Fey, when Vox is ogling just as much?

In this case, if Bunny told Vox, the most coherent complaint Vox could have made would be "Why didn't you invite me?"

Why do you think Ayla wouldn't know about Jobette and Pheebs? Jobe's transformation was common knowledge on campus -- WARS covered it, fer gossakes! And Belphoebe's creation probably was the talk of the campus for *hours*! (Being Whateley, even creating a new person would be old news quite fast) Ayla has his own information network, he wouldn't miss either case. Not to mention that She-Beast definitely DOES know about both of them, and she's way friendly with Ayla.

Or maybe you meant that Ayla doesn't know about them working at Bunny's Egg-cellent Car Wash. Well... he knew about the car wash, he knew about the topless elves... he may even have *funded* the car wash for all we know... why wouldn't he know who were the topless elves?

Ayla gets to see Nikki a lot more than just topless on a regular basis. So yeah. I presume that's EXACTLY what he went for. :evil:

The dome light won't help much.

Sit in a dark parking lot. Turn on your dome light. Look through the windows, and look for the parking lot surface.

The reflections off of the inside of the windows will glare out what's outside, and the rest will be indistinct.

The HEADLIGHTS would help quite a lot, though. Even if Jobe and Phoebe are not in front of the car, enough light should be reflected off walls & sundry washing equipment to see them by.

It's inside campus. Private road. Normal DMV rules don't apply.

Of course, that means Ayla can't take her brand-new car outside campus by herself. But then, she bought it JUST to take it through the car wash...

You don't need a learner's permit in New Hampshire. However, he's still under age (it's 15 1/2) and he does need a licensed driver over 25 in the vehicle.

Who's hiding in the passenger seat who has a license? I think the relevant question is "Why is Ayla driving a car?" Surely he'd be in a chauffeur driven limo? (Besides, hiring a limo would be a lot less than buying a car.)

Why is Ayla driving the car?

Why hasn't he hired a limo and chauffeur?

Clearly, it must be for purely financial reasons. Right? Ayla wouldn't stoop to anything prurient, right? Right?

And no, this has nothing to do with Peeper and Greasy hiding in the rented limo's trunk with that stack of video recording gear...

Maybe because she still has some hangups about the idea of having sex with a *male*... so she doesn't deal with it in the way it would be expected from a Lust Goddess, and falls back in her old human behavior patterns...

Also because I thought it'd be funny. ...Although there was that awkward 'sex with a guy' thing she's weird about. Good memory there Surly!

This one is a .. uh... perverse variety of injokes. Dont click if you arent cool with Sara and her penis jars;

<http://drunkfu.deviantart.com/art/Jobe-Watch-45-127753088>

Incidentally the large Ayla jar was inspired to me by Pervy Kitty (katherine) of the irc channel. And as for the rest, I just assumed since Jade had a spare one out there Sara would be obligated to collect it.

I imagine she'd have a little difficulty in getting it away from Thuban. And that last jar will doubtless make Ayla very nervous.

Perhaps you should have a later strip show Ayla with his hands constantly covering his crotch whenever Sara's around. She could then ask him why he does that and he could reply "I've seen your jars".

Charm suggested a few comic strips of Peeper and Greasy in the car wash and it seemed a good idea to space things out. Perhaps after the whole grand Mister Prickles story ark I got planned is ended with I'll put the Jobe comics aside and do something else.

Um, quoting at them in the upper stratosphere won't do too much good, they're in her car, on the ground.

Unless she takes the car with her.

Then they can't get away.

And Greasy's a fellow gear head! Loophole might have been willing to let him take her car for a spin with the promise of a free washing)

Actually, those aren't "birth control glasses" (as I understand it, old military joke for military-issue eyeglass frames -- cheap, thick, sturdy, and very, very ugly). Hers are expensive *designer* glasses (check the Ayla stories for an evaluation) carefully chosen to enhance her "hardass" image -- as are her clothes in general. She's an Exemplar, she has money and she likes quality clothes; she also consciously tries to emulate the Beautiful All Along trope.. I wonder what did she wear for her date with Alex... (see "Catgirl Madness").

Grunts Vs Drow in the Crash!

The Grunts would win but after Jobe's little surprises and whatever Belphebe cobbles together it may be a Pyrrhic victory.

You sure about that? Fighting against Jobe would be an exercise in taking him down in the first second or so, before he can unleash some biological terror. After that, the best they can hope for is a stalemate as both teams KO each other. Guns don't work so well on microscopic agents, but regeneration can take care of a few bullet wounds.

That's why I was thinking Pyrrhic Victory.

Bunker fires Napalm in between them to kill anything he might be tossing but Belphebe tosses some of Bunny's cryo eggs then Jobe tosses a Vial as Mule unloads with a M60

Everyone goes to the hospital but the grunts were the last ones standing so they "win".

Of course they will take a lot longer to get out of the hospital than the drow will. :p

Punch knocked him out before falling over but even with regen had to spend some time in the hospital.

Uhhh... according to his story, Jobe DID have extensive training in personal defense and martial arts BEFORE coming to Whateley (apparently, Emperor Wilkins believes in one fighting one's own battles, and not trusting one's Doomsday Devise to work correctly at the crucial moment). So, he probably wasn't a pushover, even without considering his bio-weapons. Now with her drow body, she could be quite formidable -- as soon as she gets practice with the new height, weight distribution and such.

Yea, I can definitely see how the new weight distribution could very easily throw one off. Especially when it gets to jiggling.

negation wrote on Wed, 15 July 2009 09:21 I've pictured him as more like Michael Clarke Duncan or Laurence Fishburne.

I would have to age them mentally, since they are both significantly younger than Bardue (who is in his sixties, and is *not* a mutant). Fishburne was born in 1961, that is, he is only 47. Duncan is slightly older, being born in 1957. If we were casting a Whateley movie, though, I think Fishburne, with some makeup to look older, would be a very good choice. Duncan has a bit of a "thuggish" face, he projects more fear than respect.

OTOH, there are plenty of roles James Earl Jones played in his sixties (that is, pretty much anything he did in the 1990s -- he was born in 1931) to use as a mental picture of Bardue. Say, those movies based on Tom Clancy books. Too old now for a Whateley movie, though.

Perhaps older, but... how can you not hear that voice and not wanna jump and do what he says? I suppose the next comic will come at some point tomorrow. AT this rate, I can see "The Collected Drunkfu Whateley" in print in short order, on newsstands nationwide.

I'd buy one. Make it easier to browse through them all!

On a more general note about Razorback's appearance... I thought that he had been described as looking like an *humanoid* velociraptor. As such, I don't think he would look much like an animal -- more like the characters in the old Jim Henson-Disney "Dinosaurs" series, or maybe that "Star Trek: Voyager" episode in which they meet an alien race evolved from Earth's dinosaurs.

Also, I think J.G. has described Razor as wearing clothes -- rock T-Shirts with holes in the back for the spines, and some sort of pants.

For some reason I find this even funnier because Ayla had to figuratively spell it out to Jobe that he wanted to go back to being a guy but Jobe kept trying to sell the "girl package" to him.

For future reference, Ayla has black hair and a 20 inch waist (she's 33-20-33). I couldn't recognize her or understand the comment until I read your note.

Sadly in this scene, Ayla had her hair dyed for approximately 5 minutes before it wore off, and she was wearing quite the baggy clothing that concealed her curvy curves!

Probably not. Since Prickles doesn't take blood to run, it would not grow when the wearer/owner is aroused. Then again, I've seen earthworms shrink when hurt, kind of like flinching.
