I've already seen at least two posts asking the power rating of characters from outside Whateley Academy. So this thread is to figure out any and all such questions.

For example, I got bored a while ago and was reading Stephen King. I started wondering what a certain sai Mordred's ratings would be. So I looked at the wiki and I decided that if he appeared on Whateley's campus for some reason, he would be considered a Telepath 7/Shifter 6 (t/f or p/c/w/m or e)/Ex 1. If we add some of the traits of his home universe we get the aforementioned plus WA 5: r/b; t/b. And 7+6+1+5=19

If this is the wrong area for this I'm happy to let the mods move it, but it's frankly the discussion I registered to post so please tell me if you do so, kk?

[1 - out of order] I would say you're in the right forum.

[2] I can't answer this one, because I don't know the character's powers. But I can tell you that lots of fictional characters are simply not compatible with Whateley, because the Whateley power levels are too low. Classic example: any incarnation of Superman ever. Whateley bricks top out at 20 tons max, and that's only for one character who has only been mentioned in passing. So much of the DC and Marvel universes are beyond the Whateley realm.

Also, lots of characters with multiple powers may work a lot better with a reformation of their core concept. For example: let's take a girl who talks to squirrels and can command squirrels. She's as fast as an Exemplar-3 and as strong as an Exemplar-2. Her fingernails and toenails are unusually strong and thicker than normal. Her bones are lighter than normal human baseline bones, and yet stronger. She has innate abilities to climb trees, sense whether branches can hold her, and such. Would we classify her as Exemplar-3 / Esper-2 /Psi-2 with some GSD? No, it makes more sense to reformulate things and realize that all of her powers come from the squirrel spirit now inside her. She's an Avatar-1. That's all.

Does that help any?

Diane

I know that it's not always possible. I've just seen people wondering about characters already and I thought it might be easier to have all those discussions in one place :d

ETA: As for Mordred, he's a telepathic werespider from a universe where the laws of physics are breaking down and the number 19 is an omen. Stephen King has a wild imagination, man.

Possibly a Batson Type.

Had to have fun and post that one.

On the other hand I had a heck of a Time Figuring out Hangfire's powers. They were originally done via the Aberrant d10 rule system aka the Storyteller system.

Just a few characters from Velgarth...

Vanyel Ashkevron
WIZ-7
PDP-7
Clairvoyance-2

Talia Queensherald
Empathy-4/5(Probably closer to five)

The many and various Companions are all Avatars... sort of. although they couldn't be classified, going by Whateley rules, considering that they're... not exactly human.

Did Vanyel have access to all the mind magics? Based on what I remember from those stories, I'd probably define him as mage 5 with tons of skill and psi 1 or 2, with a class 2 esp talent of clairvoyance. Talia would probably be given psi 2(empath).

After the Gate incident, they specifically said that all of the channels got blasted wide open, which was part of all of his troubles. He had EVERYTHING. We just don't see him use much of it because the Magegift took prominence in his life - at least the interesting parts of it. I can quote the passage if you want me to.

And I'm kind of fuzzy on how the psi things are done. Even still, her Empathy is noted to be extraordinarily strong, even for Healers, which is part of the reason she can do things like the Mind Rape and why her shielding is such a big deal in book two.

I figured that Psi 2 was normally including all the abilities, at least here, having it all focused on empathy or empathy related stuff would lead to a very powerful ability. My reasoning is that the Heralds generally only have one or two talents, almost never do they have all of them, so most of them would be psi 1 or 2, with major focus, and their strength comes from skill. I think I will give you the psi 4 empathy, given the power and the fact that they assumed she had high skill since she had such high power, but even the firestarter who managed to destroy a mountain range and a army would probably be manifestor 3 at most, since that incident was a major burnout.

Out of curiousity, after having that gate thing happen, how powerful are his other powers? I know his mage powers are very strong, but most of that was still skill and training.

Subject: Re: Panfandom MIDs

I'm pretty sure there's a throw-away mention of him being the fartherest Farspeaker amongst ALL the Heralds, although for the life of me I couldn't tell you where, he's used Healer powers including Empathy at least once, mostly with Randal, and he clearly saw a future of himself some 30+ years, I think it is, even if it WAS the only example of Clairvoyance he actually shows. WIZ probably IS a seven, considering he not only made a Hearthstone, but he also wove a web connecting every herald, something that would take an obscene amount of power both gathered and the ability to control it. Fact is, Vanyel was basically the third most powerful person in all of Velgarth, short only Urtho and Maar. And that's a toss-up to say whose more powerful.

Edit: And Lavan's last stand wasn't really a burn out, it was more a Firestarter's renditioning of a Mage's Last Stand. And he kind of lost the only thing that really kept him sane.

For two reasons: 1. His mentor McCoy has to be a 5 for trying to train someone like harry in the first place.

2. How many time have we seen harry get caution torture to with in less than an inch of his life (lets not touch on the whole gutting situation) only to have been saved by someone else in the end.

Harry does have the devil's own luck, maybe he's a mangler. I'd replace the Badass 4 with Determinator 7, Harry never gives up, even when dead... all twice that he's been so.

Though he does need a badass rating, I'm just not sure how high it is at this time.

Don't read the spoiler unless you're caught up in the books, please.

Toggle SpoilerHe did manage to both assassinate himself and survive the assassination, though that did need help for both

Maybe Harry is the avatar of awesomeness, probably Avatar 6 or 7, to survive it.

You're wrong. :)

Part of Holmes method is that it's learnable: something that anyone can do if they're only single-minded enough.

He's physically capable, but not really at the Ex2 level. When it comes to violence he triumphs due to impressive skill where his foes rely on brute force.

And he's intelligent, but lacks some of the common attributes of the mental exemplar, notably the memory. His is good, but he still relies on other people and a substantial archive. He'll often have a partial recollection, then have to go through several weeks of newspapers to find the details.

ESP? Not really. He does notice things but that's concentration. And he may not notice things in an area outside his expertise; that's one of the key reasons he keeps Watson around, for his forensic medical knowledge.

I think that part of Holmes' appeal is that he's just a normal, (if extraordinary) man.

First, Exemplar-2 level of physical fitness is learnable.

Second, of course any character from a non supernatural setting is going to be a baseline without actual power. It's about adaptation.

Master chief is also canonically a Mangler. I'd say he's a Warper-4 at least, because it is pretty much his luck that is the reason that the Covenant didn't win. He took out Covenant battle fleets, by luck and sabotage alone.

Divis Mal (Probably more powerful then listed here)[This guy could take on Tennyo or Bladedancer with little fear.]

EX 7, EN(superman) 7+, Warp 4+ (Time/Space), Shifter 2+ (possibly 5 at power mimic level) Regen 7+ (His Batson Event was in 1922)

Sure, if he was a Whateley character. But those are non-universe characters, so the Whateley definitions don't really apply. The idea is to see which would be their ratings under the Whateley mutant classification system.

If you stick to the mutant/non-mutant Whateley categories, very few non-universe characters could be rated at all, since they don't fit the Whateley definition of "mutant." You couldn't rate Spider-Man, or John Constantine, or Tony Stark, or John McClane for that matter.

Yeah, Scrooge is subject to a number of variant interpretations. Some writers make a big deal of his alleged ability of finding gold by the scent, but under Barks, the only mention I remember was him appreciating the scent of banknotes (check A Christmas for Shacktown). Rosa and the Italian writers do make him a rager, but Barks didn't do it so much. Barks often ended stories with Scrooge chasing Donald (who, by the way, probably also rates as a Rager under some authors -- must be in the genes...) with his cane, but nothing comparable to the Yukon scenes in "Life of Times of Scrooge McDuck."

Possibly.

Spider-Man: outside Whateley strength levels
John McClane: possible EX-2 (he looks like Bruce Willis, of course he's an Exemplar), and possibly a low-level probability Warper too
Tony Stark: given all the capabilities of the Iron Man armor, he's probably outside Whateley levels too
John Constantine: Wiz-2 but has studied a lot

Or maybe these are all wrong.

Now why doesn't someone else try some of these:
Buffy Summers
Willow Rosenberg
Alex Mack
Selina Kyle
Samantha Carter
Xander Harris
Ethan Rayne

If you want to list someone as an Origin instead of a mutant, show your work.

Spider-Man: outside Whateley strength levelsHow? I don't remember him being able to lift more than 20 tons. He would probably be Exemplar 6 (he IS very strong), with a very marked mental package (that could cover both danger sense and super inventor skills). He might be ESP-2 (danger sense) instead, and if you take one of the version where he has invented more than the web fluid, possibly some low level Gadgeteering.
Diane Castle wrote on Sat, 14 January 2012 09:10John McClane: possible EX-2 (he looks like Bruce Willis, of course he's an Exemplar), and possibly a low-level probability Warper tooTotally. I don't think he could gets in so much trouble and always happen to be in the wrong place at the right place without some (uncontrolled) probability Warping!

impressive than what Stark does in the movie in just a couple weeks of work, in secret inside public facilities.
So I don't see how he'd be too powerful, unless you want to cover everything he's done in the various places he has appeared, rather than choosing one.

At first she was just a dabbling highschooler, but when she goes all Dark Willow on the team she can sling some relatively impressive effects around. I don't think it would be above 4 since "throwing one bolt of lightning" and "throwing a couple of homing knives" is the very best she managed (other than "launch a world-ending plot device", but that's a plot device so it's not really saying anything about her).
She did some extremely impressive magic at the end, but she had lots of preparation so it's not very useful in determining her Wiz rating per Whateley standard.
Diane Castle wrote on Sat, 14 January 2012 09:10Samantha CarterI'd say Gadgeteer, or a mental Exemplar package. Of course given how she looks it should probably be Exemplar-1 plus a level 3 or 4 mental half, but (almost) all actors are good looking in series.

I think I'd put her at the low end of Ex-4. That would give her better healing, too, which she certainly shows. Some level of Paragon, to reflect the instinctive combat abilities. And Wiz-1. More to show her resistance to magic than anything else, although she has done some ritual magic on occasion.

Note that a good way to stat a Slayer would be to simply say "Avatar-3, spirit of the Slayer". That's precisely waht they are, after all.
Potentials would be Avatars without a bound spirit.

It doesn't take a huge amount of force to rip the skin off, and "killing one baseline without defense once" is not sufficiently impressive to require a jump all the way to Wiz-5 (that would be significantly more powerful than anyone at Whateley but Fey, even majestic).

Shifter limited to two-forms; human, and a puddle of green slime (it's good she's a tomboy...)

She glows green when embarrassed. (Minor GSD?)

The 'slime' is a silvery form that doesn't appear to have any restrictions on what it can do (more than once she has 'slimed' someone else, made them fluid too, and moved them with her, then turning them back to normal too). So that's technically more than two forms, and soemthing more than mere shapeshifting.

Plus she used to glow yellow when embarrassed or upset (or otherwise really emotional.) And there was a thing where she could burp bubbles, but that seemed... peculiar.

Telekinesis, as DP pointed out.

And potentially massive electrical powers, given the last thing she does in the last scene of the show (her blast goes all the way into the clouds overhead and affects an entire cloud).

But she's an Origin Hero, so the mutant power levels probably aren't relevant.

There would be no need for a GSD to represent that sort of thing.

Alex Mack- origin/induced by super science, so all ratings have induced prefix.

Ex-1 Reason GC-161 was developed as weight loss formula and prevent subject from getting fat. (And may include track ability)

Tk-1c never seen lift more than a few pounds, and gained more fine control over time.(In other words the effect guys got better at doing it.)

En- external(shoots of eletricity in both con concentrated beams and wide area to power eletrical devices.) Internal(When consumed curry reacted to unstable nature of gc-161 and allowed for superstrength, estimate at 2 tons.)

Sh-(?) Ability to turn to liquid at will and take other objects with her, including people.

Love the show, and wish they put the season 2&3 on dvd. The blushing stopped after season 1. I'm fanwanking since gc-161 glowed and Alex had a lot of unabsorbed on her bloodstream, so when she blushed the blood ran to her face. Actually, a producer probably thought just that it was to silly to keep going any longer.

Ok here's one that we talked about (I think) in another post, but here goes:

Based on the movie alone, from what was shown.

Captain America

Ex-4 or (5 at most, leaping the tank)
Esp-2 Paragon (the shield throwing)possible Danger Sense

Samual Whitwiki(transformers)
Ex-1
Wa-2 probability (The bad kind, he keeps getting in to trouble)

Evelyn Salt
Ex-2
Badass-5 (she broke into the whitehouse and could have killed the president)

Rapunzel
Healer-3 (hair)
Ex-2 (Looks)
Wiz-3(Hair)

Bruce Wayne
Ex-3 (Physical) 4(Mental)
Regen-2

Badass-6 (He backed down Darkseid, and has beaten at least half of the superheroes in DC)

Sorry but I had to add one more:

Damian Wayne(new Robin)
Ex-2 possible 3 when grown
Little Bastard-6

These are just a few rolling around in my head hope you get a laugh or two out of it.

I still say Bruce Wayne has to be baseline, nothing he does requires powers, and he generally doesn't invent his own tools, as far as I'm aware, and besides, his Badass level is completely dependent on his being a normal human who is very obsessive. If you give him powers, the levels come out of the Badass category.

1. Dpragan, don't you mean Captain STEVE Rogers? Will Rogers was a cowboy, not Captain America.

2. Khade, yes, Batman is supposed to be "just human." OTOH, he is an EXTREMELY good fighter and has recovered (fully) from more injuries than a full season of the NHL, NFL and UFC put together -- usually in a relatively short time. Not to mention that, well, he's a genius. He's the guy who can instantly assess a situation, find the truth under the red herrings and devise four or five valid strategies to counter it. And, as an afterthought, is also considered very handsome.

So, taken together... if he was in the Whateley U, those would smell (undiscovered) low-level Exemplar to me, giving him some boost in the looks, intelligence, strength, coordination, reflexes and healing. Although he probably would be a genius even without the Exemplar mental package. It probably just bumped his IQ from 190 to 210.

We've done Buffy and friends, so what about a boarding school somewhere up in Northumberland, UK; housed in a castle protected by various charms to make outsiders think it's a ruin?

Most students would probably be in the range WIZ 0 - 3, since use of magic usually requires a combination of person, wand, incantation and practice.

A certain pair of twins could probably also have a devisor rating, given their line of business...

I'd say that they'd all be at least Wiz 1. The fact that they're there indicates that they possess a certain amount of magical ability.

One of the difficulties, it appears to me, is that people get noticeably stronger with experience and knowledge. Not just like a Wiz 2 who prepares well but actually increasing their rating.

I'd say that Mister Vimes would have to be an Exemplar of some level, if only from the sheer number of times he's almost died; as of the latest books, it seems he's also a not entirely willing Paladin... and an Avatar of himself (or at least, his inner policeman).

Captain Carrot? Exemplar, for certain. Potentially an uncontrolled Psi, given how inspirational he can be.

Corporal Nobbs? GSD. Apart from that, I don't think he's been seen to be particularly powerful.

not sure about Mr DeWord, or Dibbler.

I'd think Rincewind would need to be a low level speedster (although, we've only met one person in-story who's faster than him), and an odds mangler.

Given what's involved in keeping Ankh-Morpork running, I'd be inclined to guess that Vetenari is a high-level mental-only Exemplar.

Hmm... there was also Didactylos (or something) who was clearly a high-level Devisor or Gadgeteer (he directed people to build stuff that far exceeded the local tech level).

Then again, compared to Whateley, the universe is kind of thin, and anyone with sufficient force of will (even if momentary) is able to bend what would usually be the rules.

Well, human-powered flight IS possible. Dr. Paul MacCready proved it. Leonardo's designs are less efficient, but a high Exemplar might be able to make them fly a bit. Of course, he would run into the problem of countering torque pretty soon. And there's also the problem that his "helicopter" would fall like a rock as soon as the "pilot" got tired, since it has no glide capability.

Overall, the human-powered ornithopter might have a better chance of working, if Exemplar-powered (and built with some available lightweight materials, such as bamboo and silk).

One thing about De Vinci, according to a History Channel show about his inventions that I saw once, the era he lived in had no copyright systems, and people had a tendency to steal plans or ideas, so he put in his plans traps, one that they found was a gear that went in the wrong direction, which if they built it exactly as the plan indicated, would have torn the whole thing apart. I think it was a self propelled and armored cannon, but I can't remember.

Shameful all these Leroys and no mention of Leroy Jethro Gibbs
Ex-2 (4 mental)
Esp-3 (lie detection)
Paragon (firearms)

and while I'm at it

Ziva David
Ex-3
Paragon (weapon mastery)

Anthony Dinozzo
Ex-1 (2 mental)
Esp-2 (mild perception abilities and charm)
Wa-1 (time can appear to do nothing at all times)

Timothy McGee
Ex-1 (3 mental)
Gageteer-2
Paragon (computers only)

Abigail Sciuto
Ex-3 limited
Gageteer-2
Devisor-1

PS: If I remember my comicfan days Spider-man can lift 10 tons (or more depending on writer) that alone puts him way out of the Whateleyverse scales never mind all the other powers he has

A grab bag of characters.

Honor Harrington
Ex2 -NO regen
Empath 2
Rager?
Possibly Probability Warper. She's known as "The Salamander" for a reason. She does have a tendency to be in just the wrong place if living long and healthy are ones objectives.

Known weaknesses. No regen, immune to regenerative treatments. Poor classical math ability, (limited, exceptional natural navigator...which USES math)

Choo Choo Bear
Shifter-4?
Obviously shifter. but since the skin is always pink, and the volume seems constant, I'd refrain from going all the way to Jimmy T levels. Can shift very specific parts, so r, requiring 4. (He has shifted his testicles away from the vets attempts at neutering him at least twice...to Davans despair.)

Mike Harmon, retired SEAL.
Ex-3
Badass-3

Vicerene Alexander Graham "Tinker" "Beloved Tinker of Winds" Bell (Dufae)
Pre-change
Gadgeteer-6?
Wiz-0?

Post-Change
Gadgeteer-6?
Wiz-5?
Ex-2. Not THAT strong, a trace of regen, but elf beautiful.

I would argue that while within the context of the original "Bang Baby Universe" or the current DC Universe that Richie is just a gadgeteer with metahuman intelligence; by Whateley standards, he would have both gadgeteer and devisor ratings, particularly since some of his equipment, at least in its early versions has only been usable by him.

Under any stretch of the imagination hulk would not normally fit in the Whateley U, unless it was to smash Chuthlu himself but this one popped in my head.

Also, since Hulk in the Whateleyverse would be in the strength-7(by whatever measurement method) category, the wiki page on shapeshifting suggests he ought to be a shifter-7, not to mention the superleaping, speedster running, high regen and other stuff he's been seen doing in various depictions.

I thought of the I because he only(in this universe anyway) has one other form that he can shift to. Granted he can shift between them could be T but I felt that I was closer. I'm not sure you can argue the W point because of the amount of control he has over the form, whether in his base form of his engaged form, I would say that his control is equivalent to a bull rider in a rodeo. He's got control as long as he's in the barrel but once he's free all he can do is hang on for the ride.(Unconscious control on the other hand might be applied because of the way his tends to avoid killing in a situation.

Oh forgot about the shifter rating,I settled at a 6 for the size that we see, I set the bench mark for a 7 at somthing like changing into godzilla(a little high but hey in my mind thats worth a 7).

Thanks for the reply L.

Cheers

t: set number of forms (usually base+4, for most breeds)
f: full-form shift (usually, but I think more powerful/refined ones could do p, or even r) n: functional shift (different stats and natural weapons)
w: mostly at-will, but I recall that sometimes phase-of-the-moon and particularly rage might trigger shifts, so maybe s+w

Combat in the world of darkness definitely has rules for changing what the shift does to internal organs and shifting with blows to soak damage better.

I'll reread when i get home to see what else i can find i think.

Primarily to put their capabilities a bit more solidly in my head.

ENt = trained Energizer trait, chi tricks essentially. Limited to body enhancement, aura/force fields and blasts of non specific energy.

ENt 0 = foundational training but not actually usable yet

Using Wiz 0 to encompass both shaping and what DB defines as magic, which is basically power mimicry

Mao Semezou (36)
Ratings: ESP 3, ENt ???, Wiz 0
Techniques: forceful attitude, feng shui, chi disks, seals, aikido, jujutsu, tai chi, stav, savate, pankration, cloaking, emergency physical medicine, emergency life force medicine, curse-breaking, secondary life force, channeling, bulletproof to medium handgun, stealth, bare passing firearms skill
Weak vs: family curse (High magic, calling on Gods and Demons, causes pain and possible internal bleeding), cannot lie worth anything
Backup Associations: Semezou triplets, Psyche, Avalon, NATO, CIA, MI-6
Note: Oread, cremation on death to prevent biohazard
Note: Psyche verified instructor: channeling, shaping, feng shui(considered highest expert), martial arts, exorcism and curse breaking, escape and evade, gun safety (NOT marksmanship)
Note: on the preferred list for setting up Psyche safe houses

Eija Semezou (16)
Ratings: ENt 2, EX 1-2, Wiz 0, ESP 3, PSI 6+(dead minds)
Techniques: cloaking, paramedic training (no license), medical acupuncture and pressure points, death seer, body enhancement, ghost psychology, exorcism and curse breaking, white magic(mostly healing limited by curse), martial arts, leans heavily toward stav with use of pressure points, fear aura(leakage), secondary life force(mana), bullet resistant to light handgun
Weak vs: fear of crowds, family curse (see Mao)
Associations: Mao Semezou, Semezou Triplets, Psyche, Bravura Academy, Avalon, Bravura Student Council, Yooji Jeon, Damir Milo's
Note: demigod, nonhuman parent unknown

Deimosu Semezou (16)
Ratings: ENt 4, EX 2-3, Pk(elec) 4e, Wiz 0
Techniques: electrocute, short circuit, recharge, martial arts leans toward pankration, body enhancement, bulletproof to heavy handgun, secondary life force(mana), auras, cloaking

Weak vs: own arrogance, family curse (see Mao Semezou)
Associations: Mao Semezou, Semezou Triplets, Psyche, Bravura Academy
Note: demigod, Zeus

Naiki Semezou (16)
Ratings: ENt 6, EX 3-4, Wiz 0, PK(earth) 6c (ESP - empathic to sharks unconfirmed 3)
Techniques: earthquake generation, stalactite generation, bulletproof to heavy machine gun, auras(resistant up to antitank rockets, but maintaining will strain), super strength, breathe underwater, chi discs, martial arts(anything aggressive), electrical sense, vibratory sense, enhanced sense of smell, sharp teeth, secondary life force(mana), stealth, cloaking, "Wait, what?"
Weak vs: blonds, forethought, academics, family curse (see Mao Semezou), air travel
Associations: Mao Semezou, Semezou Triplets, Psyche, Hel Logesdottir, Bravura Academy, Avalon
Note: demigod nonhuman parent unknown

Yoon-Ji "Yooji" Jeon (16)
Ratings: ESP 1 (training will take to 3), Gad 4, Wiz 1, EX 1, Toggle SpoilerWARp 5
Techniques: prediction, programming, "bad-ass Korean", Backscratcher of Imminent Beatdown, Will to excel, intimidation, disease resistant, Toggle SpoilerEureka field-anyone near her or psychically connected to her learns faster and is more prone to sudden inspirations
Weak vs: weirdness, stepmother, psychic intrusion
Associations: Bravura Academy, Jeon Industries, Avalon, the Semezou Triplets, Bravura Student Council, Eija Semezou, Damir Milos
Note: akira (untrained or irresponsible psychic)

Damir Milos (16)
Ratings: baseline
Techniques: upright combat pilot, upright civilian construction license, most modern weapons, commando, knife, stealth, survival, demolitions, hostage rescue, psychic power category knowledge, psyline training (avoiding psychic line of sight)
Weak vs: normal human limits
Associations: Avalon, Bravura Academy, Dunadan unit, Semezou Triplets, Bravura Student Council, Gaetana Troletti, Yooji Jeon, Eija Semezou

Hel Logesdottir (16 - 13,000)
Ratings: ESP 3, Wiz 2(artificially limited), EX 1, PSI 3 (5 vs dead minds), ENt 2(artificially limited), Gad 1, WAR 5l
Techniques: inevitable incarceration, shaping, dimensional burst, seals, Realm: Prisons, chip on shoulder
Weak vs: own paranoia, embarrassing hobbies, cute boys, crippled (left side useless), fear of ghosts, obsession with academic supremacy, psychic intrusion

Associations: Abyssal Guardians (past and future Warden of the Abyss), House Aesir, Lilitu Geisthexe, Faustians, Heralds, Shadows, Eyes of Ra, Elysium Providers, the Semezou Triplets, Bravura Academy
Note: Demon, born Nirvana, defected to Yomi, 10k+ years of memory left in Nirvana unrecovered, still connections with Nirvana Gods

Eowyn Desai (26)
Ratings: ENt 0
Techniques: Tai chi, small unit lead, solo tactics, escape and evade, killing underground fire using beasts she'd rather not identify, upright pilot, tactical genius, upright shield
Weak vs: normal human limits
Associations: Dunadan Unit, Gaetana Troletti, Avalon, Mao Semezou, US Marines

Lilitu Geisthexe (50 - 5400)
Ratings: ESP 3, PSI 4, PK (smoke) 7g, Wiz 6+(externally enhanced), ENt 4, EX 1, WAR 5l, Gad 1

That entry gives me head aches when I try using it. I tried working up a char and I ended up with a level 5 for a shifter that has but 2 forms mostly human forms, no frills, and limited control on shifting between them.

And.... Just cause I was watching them the other day:

Demona (cartoon version)
Ex 3
GSD Moderate/Severe
Wiz 3
Manifest 2/?/a (stone skin)(lost)
Regen 3 (stone sleep)
Shifter 4 i, f, s, (?) (Good case in point for my issues of the Shifter table)

Goliath
Ex 5
Manifest 2/?/a (stone skin)
Regen 3 (stone sleep)
GSD Moderate/Severe

Lex
Ex 2
Gadgeteer 1-2
Devisor ?
Manifest 2/?/a (stone skin)
Regen 3 (stone sleep)
GSD Moderate/Severe

[b]Elisa Maza[/u]
Ex 1
Wiz (latent, by way of her Father's connection to the Coyote spirit)
Probability masher 2 (she get to dang lucky at times)

Xanatose
Bad ass Baseline

Fox
Ex 2-3

Wiz 2-3
Shifter (lost, Eye of odin)

The Mutates
Energizer (internal) 3-4 (faux Ex)
Energizer (external) 2-4 (energy blasts)
GSD Moderate/Severe

Monkey D. Luffy
Shifter - 5
Exemplar - 5
Telepathy - 2
TK force field - 1
Warper - 1
Precognition - 1
(I believe these neatly encapsulates his Haki powers.)

Roronoa Zoro

Exemplar - 7
Wind control - 5

Nami

ESP - 1
Exemplar - 2

Usopp

Gadgeteer - 3
Precognition - 3 (uncontrolled)

Sanji

Exemplar - 7
Pyrokinesis - 4

Tony Tony Chopper

Shifter - 6 (multiple set forms)
Devisor - 3

Nico Robin

Manifestor - 6
Exemplar - 2

Franky

Devisor - 4

Brook

Avatar - 1
Channeler - 3
Siren - 2

I've probably undersold or oversold some of them so feel free to correct me.

Inoue Orihime (Bleach)
WA-7 (reality rejection limited only by her own willpower; rejection takes the form of attack, defence (or a combination of the two) or healing)
Healing-7 (subset of the Warper powers; can restore long-vaporised limbs and even bring the newly dead back to life)
MAN-1 (previously listed powers are effected through six "fairies" created from the petals of her hairpins; each power has a specific fairy or fairies assigned to it)

Dr. Horrible's Sing-Along Blog
(I don't think anyone else has done this yet)

Captain Hammer:
- Pk-2
- Ex-3
Given that it took an exploding devise to hurt him, he probably has a PK field. Exemplar from the "I don't go to the gym, I'm just naturally like this". However, neither of these ratings are that high, as he doesn't seem to have the "Man of Steel, Woman of Kleenex" problem with penny. Captain Hammer could be a Exemplar brick, but that would imply a higher Ex rating, and hence have other problems.

Dr. Horrible:
- Ex-3
- Dev-4
Ex-2 (or higher, I've picked 3 to match Captain Hammer) for the beating he takes without any permanent damage, the freeze ray would need a decent Dev rating to create

Moist
- Ma-1
Greasy without the Grease)

Bad Horse (this is guessing)
- Ex-4 (GSD)
Given how well known Bad Horse is, and his position as head of the Evil League of Evil, he'd have to be pretty intelligent. However, how he came to be a horse is not really apparent, it could be a curse of some form (although, affecting an exemplar is neigh^W nigh on impossible) so I'd assume his BIT is that of a horse.

Based on what the actor said, Captain Hammer has some minor GSD, due to his comment about what the hammer is, though that might have actually been humor. And Bad Horse is heavily implied to just be a horse, though still evil.

What would you rate the 'character' Flubber from the 1997 movie of the same name?

The idea of the World Tree's been bouncing in my head and ended up colliding with something written by Terry Brooks in his Shannara series; the trees started out life as a person who gave up their humanoid life for the world and magic.

Code Name: Arbor
Gender: Female

Rating:
Exemplar 1 / Avatar ??
Testers can't decide, and they get mixed results on the Avatar test.
She appears to be a Sihde type, but she's also got plant like changes
Energizer 1/1
Mixed External/Internal
She photosynthesizes to live
Puts out magical energies
Healer 1
Over looked when power tested

Weaknesses:
She's sick enough that she's in Hawthorn
Fey/anyone drawing on magic Synthetics
Pollutants
Iron
Alcohol
Lack of sun light

Notes:
She is a World Tree Seed, more or less, and is tied to the state of the Earth
All her abilities would be higher if the world was in better shape
Descended from those who once guarded the World Trees, and the spells for their nuture and creation are in her blood.
To awaken her full potential the Earth's conditions must improve significantly
See Just a little Growth Plant Sim mod for general look

James Bond: Ex-2, WAR-7p ('cause he survives the unlikeliest situations, including being brought back from poisoning death with a defibrilator, being in ice-cold water for at least a minute and a half without getting hypothermia or drowning, and being shot off a train, landing deep in the water looking unconscious, and STILL surviving..., AND managing to be at the right place at the right time so often), possible internal GSD for the survival factor. Also possible Paragon, but maybe not. Also, considering what happened at the end of Skyfall, maybe DEV-1, though that could be the probability warper thing, too.

Kinda like one of my characters:

Quote:Melody Harper aka Foresight: Whateley class of 2001 (Underdog) With a name like Melody you would expect a Siren type Mutant, but you would be wrong. Melody is a Precog, but not a very strong one, Her power works best when she is supplying her team, she seems to know just the right thing to pack, and the right spare uniforms to include, even if her choices seem off, they always prove correct in hindsight.

I think most of the ME characters would fit right in without too much stretch. The most powerful biotics would still fit in the Whateley PK scales. The strongest Krogan would still not be able to take an Exemplar-7. The coolest weapons could be devised in Whateley Academy.

But most important of all, you'd have the voices of Seth Green and Jennifer Hale! (Yes, Jennifer Hale is a requirement. Female Shepard has a much better delivery of the same lines.)

And finally... "Reaper, meet Tennyo. Tennyo? This is a Reaper. You two have fun."

Anytime you want to write an ME/WU fanfic, just go right ahead.

Considering that the Reapers are obviously high level necromantic constructs (in this context), then you could have The Necromancer as an indoctrinated pawn, and redo the first Boston Brawl with husks rather than conventional zombies.

I still don't understand why people call this person holy. Here in the Netherlands most people just have celebrated Sint Nicolaas but let's face it, he is a 'children's friend' whom is said to have Zwarte Piet put the children whom are not behaving as he thinks right in a bag, to take them with him to Spain to have them labor for him.
So he is just a entrepreneur using child labor and slavery, and God knows what he makes those children do else well, with good marketing.

blink I have never heard Santa Claus called holy, magical yes but never holy.

Your right about him being a entrepreneur with questionable methods. Over here he keeps a race of elves captive and forces them to work all year long for him. Makes animal fly in dangerous conditions, and commits numerous acts of breaking and entering. But I guess when your a celebrity you can get away with anything. :d

Pre-change
Gadgeteer-6?
Wiz-0?

I'd say
Gadgeteer-6
Ex-6 (limited)
Wiz-3
Esp-2 (precognitive)

The Wiz rating is hard to say, since magic is so different in the Tinkerverse. She does have access to one esva, although she doesn't actually learn it until after the change.
Quote:
Post-Change
Gadgeteer-6?
Wiz-5?
Ex-2. Not THAT strong, a trace of regen, but elf beautiful.

Gadgeteer-6
Ex-6 (limited)
Ex-1
Regen-2
Wiz-6
Esp-2 (precognitive)

Tinker gained absolutely no improvements physically from the change, merely a slightly enhanced appearance. She's no stronger or more athletic than before, thus only Ex-1. On the other hand, she has access to 3 esva, which is more than anybody else (that we know of) in the entire Tinkerverse, thus the very high Wiz rating.

Velma Dinkley: Ex 2 (Ex3 Mental)

Norville Rogers: En 1

Scoobert-Doo: Shifter 0 En 1 Ex 3m(Canine)

Note Velma is reported to be very strong in the Wikia, the Warp is for Daphne's odd bouts of falling into trouble, Scooby talks and seems very flexible and the EN is because he [And Shaggy] are some of the fastest runners of the group when it comes down to it.
